Volume 1 Issue 9

The President's Corner by William Purkey

Hello, ONSD and Happy New Year.

2010 has been a good year for ONSD. We've visited the Revolutionary War Alamance Battlefield four times and Mendenhall Plantation twice. (Both groups will have displays of our historic finds.) We've also mounted attractive displays and staffed display tables at a number of locations and events. Three "Golden Detector Awards" have been presented to members who returned lost items to their owners. More importantly, we have developed a strong leadership team that is committed to making ONSD an enjoyable, productive, and ethical club.

Looking ahead, we are exploring opportunities to work with various police agencies on crime scenes, and with Pilot Life Insurance Company to search for Civil War artifacts on their Sedgefield area property in Guilford County. It should be a very good year.

See you on Saturday morning, January 29th at 9:00 a.m. We will meet at the Golden Corral Restaurant, 4404 Landview Drive in Greensboro.

William Purkey
ONSD President

In next month's issue we'll feature a story on Geocaching, a 10-year old hobby which uses handheld GPS receivers to located hidden caches placed around the world. Unlike metal detecting, this hobby requires no digging tools or pin pointers. In fact, burying a cache is prohibited.

From a small beginning in Oregon, geocaching has quickly spread to presently include over 1.2 million worldwide locations and 5.4 million geocachers. For a look, visit the main site at www.geocaching.com

“DROP ZONE SICILY”

BY

JAMES FURMAGE

Hello All,

I thought I would submit for a golden detector award and tell a story in doing so. It was early, and cold on Nov 26th 2010 when my children and I went for a little TREASURE hunt. While visiting my in-laws In Fayetteville NC we decided to go detecting. With permission from the base security C.O. we were off to Fort Bragg a well known drop zone for paratroopers "Sicily Drop Zone". Thousands and thousands of yards to search, so we fired up the Fisher F2 and Garret ACE 250 and went to work. Right from the start multiple targets in the iron class showed up, as we dug them we found shrapnel, blank fired casings, M60 links, well you get the idea. So much in fact we had to discriminate iron out to prevent us from needing a back hoe to excavate quicker.

As we made our way through the open areas we found chem-light sticks, MRE wrappers, pencils, pens and trash that we luckily had a trash bag for us to discard at the end of the hunt. Then much to my delight I dug a target that showed between tab and penny that was pale gray/white ball. I have seen this before I thought and showed my sons the MUSKET BALL I dug. They were pretty hyper about it. Well as time went I noticed we were finding these MUSKET BALLS every where, then I find a pile of them about 20 balls in all. Now this is strange, so I ask my father in-law who is a retired 1StSgt Division Artillery if they still fired any artillery that used lead balls. He answered not during his time in service which dated back to Vietnam. Then my sons called for us because they found something and they were instructed not to pick up anything without an adult. Well they had found a base plate of a fired artillery round, I finished digging to find it covering about 25 pounds of lead balls.

Ok now one would ask, why do you SHELL troops who are PRACTICE jumping into a TRAINING drop zone? The answer is you don't, so this area must be an old artillery/bombing range. So we gathered our fair share of lead balls and continue for another hour or so. Now to the award part of this story, while doing this hunt, I found a soldiers dog tags with wedding band attached to the chain. Dog tags have full name, social security number, blood type and religious preference. So with this info in hand I contacted the one person on base I thought would be the most helpful in finding the owner, the base CHAPLAIN. I gave him the name and social security number of the soldier and asked if he could see if he was still at Fort Bragg so I may return it to him.

The Chaplain returned my phone call and said the soldier had since relocated to Fort Campbell Kentucky and the Chaplain e-mailed the soldier with my info. Saturday afternoon I get a call from Darren the soldier and told him what I had and that if he could identify I would send it to him. As you may have guessed he was able to ID it SSN was match and told me that the ring was his wedding ring that he put it with tags so as to keep around his neck when he parachuted out of the aircraft. So with a little postage it is enroute to its owner.

And now my research into artillery has lead (no pun intended) me to WWI or WWII artillery. My father in-law and I both are researching this, so for now that chapter is TO BE CONTINUED.

Thanks
James Furmage
