The President's Corner

by William Purkey

Hello, ONSD Members,

This note is to encourage everyone in the club to reach out and start forming friendships with fellow members they don't know. A treasure worth more than silver or gold is a good friend.

One of the most significant purposes of the Old North State Detectorists is to bring together like-minded people who enjoy metal detecting. This togetherness is often the source of forming friendships. For example, we have five members from High Point. I'll bet that most of these five members do not know one another. We also have 14 members from Greensboro. If I asked one of these fourteen to name four other members from Greensboro, I bet they couldn't do it. This is sad business. Not everyone has a friend. In an earlier meeting I said that "Your dearest friend was once a total stranger". It all starts with an invitation.

The next time you go hunting, pick up the phone and call one or two fellow members to go along with you. It makes the hunt far more enjoyable and it doubles the chance of finding something interesting.

Happy Hunting.

William

We've Relocated...Again

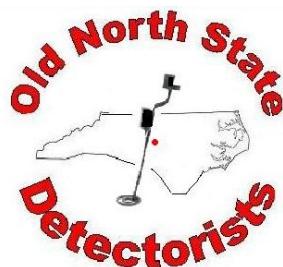

Due to a continued increase in members, the club has been forced to relocate once again. Our new monthly meeting home will be the Kathleen Clay Edwards Family Branch Library Community Room located at 1420 Price Park Road in Greensboro, NC.

The library opens at 9:00 am, but early arrivals can take advantage of walking trails or a near-by shelter to talk with other members before the meeting. A map with driving directions can be found here.

Do You Know Your Local History?

This famous site is in Rockingham County just over the NE Guilford County line. The campsite of General Greene, which was somewhere in a one mile radius north of High Rock Ford, is reliably reported to have never been located.

This site is also just below the ancestral home of a present-day U.S. Senator. Can you name the Senator?

GPS Units Now The Norm In Helping Metal Detectorists

Be it used for camping, hiking, or Geocaching with family and friends, hand-held portable GPS units are indispensable for those trips out into the field. The ability to mark your starting location, take off into unfamiliar terrain and return to your starting position is a simple operation. Geocachers have long used the GPS devices to locate caches hidden by coordinates. No digging is required in Geocaching as all targets are hidden only by natural foliage or ground cover.

Metal Detectorists have also found the devices to offer several advantages when out hunting. Not only can your start and return trip be mapped out, but while hunting a large area, you have the ability to later look at your tracks and see areas that may have been missed. Locations of finds can also be recorded and used to plot the boundaries of old home sites or other possible areas of past habitation. As with all electronic devices, one should have a thorough understanding of the unit's operation before depending on it in what could escalate into an emergency, such as being lost and not knowing how to follow the GPS unit back to your camp site or other hunting companions.

As always, be safe. Carry water, a snack, a small first-aid kit, and extra batteries for both your detector and GPS unit.

Purple Paint Means "No Trespassing"

If you've been out traveling the county roads, you may have come across a tree like the photo on the right. Simply put, DO NOT ENTER THIS AREA! This is equivalent to a "Posted" sign.

Member Jim Spivey created a reference sheet concerning the latest NC Trespass Laws for ONSD members and the PDF can be accessed here.

Member Robert Underwood discussed his recent display of historic and relic items recovered from Rockingham County loaned through the month of May to the downtown Reidsville, NC public library. The display was titled, "Artifacts of Early American Homesites in Rockingham County, NC".

A long time metal detectorist, coin shooter, relic hunter, researcher, and historian, Robert showed items recovered from several local plantations as well as old home sites since destroyed by development in the Rockingham County area. Items dated from the French and Indian War period to U.S. issue military buttons of 1918.

A detailed video of the exhibit will be upcoming on the club's YouTube channel at ONSD-TV.
