The President's Corner

by William Purkey

Hello, ONSD Members,

The club is enjoying an exciting year. Thanks to Jim Spivey, Mac McAtee, and their committees, ONSD will have a booth at GenFest 2012, being held on June 2, which focuses on the history, genealogy, and culture of the Piedmont. The club will also be at the Family History Fair in Raleigh on August 11. The Raleigh fair is sponsored by the Heritage Research Center. Thanks to our dedicated members, ONSD is developing an outstanding reputation as a responsible and talented organization.

The club is also enjoying a fun year. The white elephant auction will take place at the conclusion of the April 28 meeting, and a seeded hunt and picnic are scheduled for May 26. There is talk of a Myrtle Beach hunt and a return to the Cotton Patch Gold Mine. Members are also having fun returning valuables to their owners. Two club members will receive their Golden Detector Award at the April 28 meeting.

There is a growing (and I mean growing) concern regarding a suitable meeting place. We are quickly outpacing the space of our meeting room at the Madison Lindsay House. Please be thinking of another location, such as a church, Boy Scout lodge, VFW, AmVets, Marine Reserve, American Legion, Subdivision clubhouses, libraries, and public meeting rooms. The Club needs your suggestions, otherwise we'll be meeting under a bridge on I-40.

Happy Hunting.

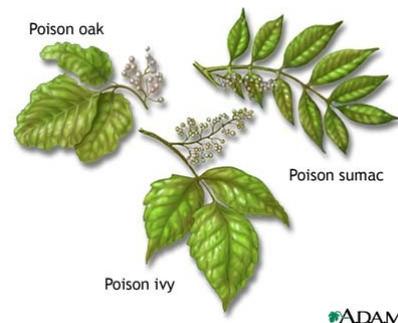

William Purkey
ONSD President

BE AWARE OUT THERE!

It's that time to be on the lookout while in the woods metal detecting with friends or family.

Only the oil (urushiol) from poison ivy, oak, or sumac plants can cause a rash (allergic contact dermatitis).

Learn to recognize these plants as they may look different depending on the season and the area where they are growing. While their appearance changes with the seasons, the plants usually contain the same amount of urushiol year-round, even in the winter, when they only appear as bare sticks. Black areas on the plants may help you identify them in the winter (urushiol turns black when exposed to air). Never handle these plants without vinyl gloves. Heavy clothing (long pants, long sleeves, enclosed footwear) may help prevent the oil from contacting your skin. Clothing or any other object that has touched the plant must be handled carefully and washed thoroughly. Products such as Tecnu or Zanel are designed to remove the plant oil from your skin. Barrier creams and lotions can also be used to prevent the oil from contacting the skin or to reduce the severity of a reaction.

ADAM

If you suspect that your skin has touched poison ivy, oak, or sumac, rinse the area with cold water immediately (within 10 to 15 minutes) to help prevent a reaction. Most of the oil is absorbed into the skin within 30 minutes. Clothing should also be thoroughly washed right away. Contaminated surfaces should be cleaned with rubbing alcohol. So, be aware out there!

MORE FINDS FROM THE AREA

I scanned the cover of the book on the right by Kevin J. Dougherty (2010). It has a C.S.A. Frock coat worn by Rockingham County's son , Lieut. Eugene Morehead - 55th NC Regiment, son of John Motley Morehead (Eden, NC). The buttons are General Staff Union Staff (Eagle wings turned up with U.S. Shield in center). Evidently he could not get CSA-made buttons for his uniform yet. Compare these buttons with the one I dug at the Crowder Site Inn, Wentworth, NC. The coat is now in the Museum of the Confederacy (Richmond, VA)
